I am a sixty-year-old purchaser of compounded prescriptions. My physician and I were unable to procure the hormones to alleviate my symptoms within my own state.

After having had a hysterectomy, I searched eight years for a cure for hot flashes, dried skin, a racing heart, reduced libido, dyspareunia, a lower energy level, occasional depression, and frequent cold sore outbreaks.

I was given "patches" and other "one-size fits all" drugs. These only increased my symptoms.

In the two years since I have been placed on natural hormones that are individually compounded, my symptoms have been relieved. I have found that allergies which plagued me since puberty have also abated.

I shudder to contemplate the curtailment of my gains in health, either by a restriction on the number of my prescriptions because they are labeled an "inordinate amount", or a total inability to obtain any of them across state lines. The very quality of my life is dependent upon the procurement of these medications in individualized dosages. Please do NOT allow this to happen.

Sincerely,

Annette
